To do CCCV charging with a DC2DC you need to provide it with 2 regulation loops, one for current, one for voltage. Thus when the battery is flat, it will operate in CC, when nearly full, CV - a common way of doing this is to add an op-amp or high-side current sense arrangement to sense current in the positive lead (e.g. TI's INA180) of a DC2DC (set for the ...

A battery can be made to approximate a constant current source by adding a series resistance - the larger the resistance the better the approximation - and the lower the current. So very discharged batteries, with high internal resistances, are better approximations to constant current sources than fully or partially charged ones.
