Furthermore, the MnNC-based Zn-air battery delivers excellent performance, including a peak power density of 130.0 mW cm⁻² and a specific capacity of 819.0 mAh g⁻¹ Zn as well as prominent durability that could continuously discharge for 60 h. This facile and scalable preparation approach provides a novel single-atom design direction for ...

Manganese-based aqueous batteries utilizing Mn^{2+}/MnO_2 redox reactions are promising choices for grid-scale energy storage due to their high theoretical specific capacity, high power capability, low-cost, and intrinsic safety with water-based electrolytes. However, the application of such systems is hindered by the insulating nature of deposited MnO_2 , resulting ...
